

Delivering a Clear Choice

Protecting your public services by modernising Royal Mail

The Communication Workers Union believes that in order to protect the universal delivery service to the great British public and maintain the “one price goes anywhere” principle we need to modernise Royal Mail.

We believe that the modernisation process should not be at the expense of the loyal postmen and women who deliver to your door, in all weathers, six days a week.

There is a better way

The CWU vision of a modern Royal Mail

Your post delivered on time to your home and business

Job security for loyal hard working staff

Reward for hard-working staff

Dignity and respect whilst at work

No compulsory moves to other locations

The pension that staff were promised

Trust between employee and employer if there is agreement

The British public and the employees of Royal Mail to have a say in the future of a public service

Royal Mail's vision

Later deliveries to your home and business

No job security or regular staff

Pay freezes

Bullying and intimidation every day

Compulsory movements to other locations

A reduced and worse pension

Misinformation and mistrust

Employees and the public to have no say in the future of a public service
